

“...if you take the left, then I will go to the right. Or if you go to the right, then I will go to the left.” Genesis 13:9

It is not a natural thing within the heart of men to prefer one another. “Is there an advantage in it for me?” “How can I best position myself to be promoted over the others?” But there is a place of trust in God alone that liberates the heart of man to certain largeness toward others.

The natural mind thinks, “As long as I must rely upon my own ingenuity, my own resources, and my own abilities, I must then secure every advantage over others if I am to assure my success!”

But the one who takes their rest in God’s love and in His resources to meet their need will find a growing confidence of heart in dealing with men. When we have once seen His love for us, when we have once seen His willingness and ability to bless our lives, it matters not whether others take the left or the right, for whichever path we find ourselves upon, we are confident our Father is waiting with an abundant blessing for us!

My Father, today I will trust you with my decisions, my choices and my blessings! Whatever others may do, I will be confident in Your ability to bless me, no matter where men may place me!
